

➤ When Home And Away returns, we'll finally learn what motivated Reverend Hall's evil acts. Cameron Welsh says: "I think people will be shocked by the ultimate outcome."

"Paul Tassone's been fantastic as Reverend Hall," he adds. "I worked with him over at All Saints and he's just one of those rare gems of an actor."

As for Paul, he says the challenging role is a world away from Nelson, his good-guy All Saints character.

"It was a real blessing to be offered this part," Paul says. "You come and play quite a functional role and don't reveal anything until right at the end. To do this character after having played Nelson was really nice. It's also terrific to play with people's perceptions of you."

Paul knew, when he signed on to play the role, that he was the hospital attacker.

"That was the clincher for me to accept the part," he explains. "It's rather controversial for the local priest to turn out to be the hospital stalker."

"And Amy and I did some amazing stuff. The scenes we did together were quite phenomenal. They made for some of the most satisfying times I've had as an actor."
